The International Society of Biomechanics (ISB) held its 25th annual conference at Glasgow, Scotland recently. A Three-Minute EDC MicroGrant Competition was conducted during the conference. Recognizing that sustainable solutions to challenges in Economically Developing Countries (EDCs) are initiated by local researchers and collaborators, this competition is intended to support innovative ideas while raising awareness about related challenges within the ISB community. Projects as proposed are intended to employ biomechanics to address challenges in an underrepresented community, provide biomechanics training and education in EDCs, and/or foster biomechanics growth in EDCs. Project leader should give a 3-min presentation during the conference for the competition.

Our Sun Yat-sen team, led by Dr. Le Li, Associated Professor of The First Affiliated Hospital of Sun Yat-sen University (SYSU), got the highest score and won the first prize of the competition.
